- LFT- Liver Function Test

About This Test

Liver function tests (LFTs) are a group of blood tests that measure various enzymes, proteins, and substances produced or processed by the liver. These tests provide valuable information about the liver's health and its ability to perform essential functions. LFTs typically include measurements of enzymes such as alanine aminotransferase (ALT) and aspartate aminotransferase (AST), which indicate liver cell damage or inflammation when elevated. Bilirubin levels are also assessed to evaluate liver function and the excretion of bile. Additionally, tests for albumin and total protein levels help assess the liver's ability to produce proteins essential for blood clotting and overall body function. LFTs are used to diagnose liver diseases such as hepatitis, cirrhosis, and fatty liver disease, monitor treatment responses, and assess overall liver health.
