About This Test

Weight Management in the Obesity Panel refers to a multidisciplinary approach to understanding, diagnosing, and treating obesity through evidence-based strategies. The obesity panel typically consists of healthcare professionals such as physicians, dietitians, fitness experts, psychologists, and sometimes endocrinologists or bariatric surgeons. Their collective goal is to create a personalized and sustainable weight management plan for individuals struggling with obesity. Laboratory tests to evaluate blood glucose levels, lipid profile, thyroid function, and inflammatory markers are also conducted to identify underlying health issues. Dietitians design meal plans tailored to the individual's caloric needs, preferences, and medical conditions. These plans often focus on a balanced intake of macronutrients, portion control, and nutrient-dense foods to promote weight loss while ensuring nutritional adequacy.
