About This Test

Stool for Occult Blood is a laboratory test used to detect hidden (invisible) blood in the stool. This blood cannot be seen with the naked eye but may indicate internal bleeding in the digestive tract. The test is commonly recommended when a patient has symptoms like weakness, anemia, abdominal pain, or black-colored stool. It helps identifying conditions such as hemorrhoids, ulcers, infections, and even early signs of colorectal cancer. For this test, a small sample of stool is collected and examined in the laboratory using special methods. If the result is negative, it means no hidden blood is detected. A positive result indicates the presence of blood, and further medical evaluation may be required to find the exact cause.
