About This Test

The VDRL (Venereal Disease Research Laboratory) and RPR (Rapid Plasma Reagin) tests are non-treponemal blood tests used to screen for syphilis. They measure antibodies produced in response to substances released during tissue damage caused by the syphilis bacteria. Both tests detect these non-specific antibodies, which may be elevated in syphilis infections. Positive results indicate a potential syphilis infection, but confirmatory treponemal tests are required for accurate diagnosis, as non-treponemal tests can also yield false positives.
