About This Test

Acidity risk markers are measurable indicators in the body that help identify the risk, presence, or underlying causes of chronic acidity, also known as acid reflux or gastroesophageal reflux disease (GERD). These markers provide insights into conditions that may disrupt normal stomach acid production or regulation. These markers help detect underlying causes such as infections, gastritis, or tumors and guide treatment, including dietary changes, medications, or advanced interventions to manage symptoms and prevent complications like ulcers or Barrett's esophagus.
