About This Test

The Glucose Challenge Test (GCT) is a screening test for gestational diabetes, conducted over three hours. First hour: The patient drinks a glucose solution, and blood is drawn after one hour to measure glucose levels. Second hour: Another blood sample is taken to measure how the body is processing the glucose. Third hour: A final blood sample is drawn to track glucose levels over the three-hour period. The test helps identify how well the body manages glucose over time, and abnormal results may indicate gestational diabetes, requiring further monitoring and treatment.
