About This Test

HBsAg rapid test detects the presence of hepatitis B surface antigen (HBsAg) in the blood. HBsAg is a protein on the surface of the hepatitis B virus (HBV) and is one of th earliest markers of HBV infection. The rapid test uses a small amount of blood and provides quick results within minutes, making it useful for screening purposes, especial in resource-limited settings. A positive result indicates current HBV infection, while a negative result suggests the absence of HBV infection at the time of testing. Howeve further confirmation with additional tests, such as HBV DNA PCR and antibody tests, may be necessary for accurate diagnosis and management of hepatitis B infection.
