About This Test

Random insulin refers to the measurement of insulin levels in the bloodstream at any time of the day, without regard to the timing of meals or fasting. This test provides immediate insight into insulin production and secretion by the pancreas, reflecting the body's response to current glucose levels. Random insulin testing is particularly useful in emergency situations to assess insulin status quickly, such as in cases of suspected hypoglycemia or hyperglycemia. It helps healthcare providers make rapid decisions regarding treatment and management of diabetes and related conditions.
