About This Test

A uric acid test measures the level of uric acid in the blood. Uric acid is a waste product formed from the breakdown of purines, which are substances found in certain food and produced naturally in the body. The test helps assess how well the body is clearing uric acid and can indicate conditions such as gout, kidney stones, or kidney dysfunction. Elevated levels may suggest impaired excretion or increased production, while low levels could be due to conditions like chronic kidney disease.
