About This Test

SS-B antibodies, also known as anti-La antibodies, measure the presence of autoantibodies against the La protein found in the nucleus of cells. These antibodies are primarily associated with autoimmune conditions like Sjögren's syndrome and systemic lupus erythematosus (SLE). Elevated SS-B antibody levels help in diagnosing these diseases and assessing disease activity. While their presence supports the diagnosis, they are not exclusive to these conditions and may be found in some healthy individuals or other disorders.
